

The Bay Area Teacher Development Collaborative

Program Registration

■ Program: Project Zero Fellows 2008-2009

This program is one of the longest running and most successful of the on-going programs sponsored by the Collaborative. Participants in it will find a forum for deep thinking and reflection about teaching and learning and for beginning or continuing their inquiry about teaching for understanding. In the course of the five meetings, four of which will be for the full day, we will practice new protocols and methods, learn more about topics of interest to the group with visiting researchers from Harvard, and work on individual projects that will be shared, observed, reflected upon, and documented. We will model the practice of life-long learning and the building of professional learning communities.

Please note that previous attendance at one or more of the BATDC Project Zero Summer Institutes is not a requirement for participation in this program. In fact, this program is appropriate for all teachers who wish to improve student learning by working with support to probe questions about assessment, lesson planning, differentiation, and disciplinary or interdisciplinary understanding. Teachers in all subjects and grade levels are welcome. And because learning together is such a powerful way to build community in a school and to encourage meaningful conversation about instruction, there will be substantial discounts for multiple participants from a school.

If additional information about PZ is helpful, please contact Janet McGarvey or visit the Project Zero web site, www.pz.harvard.edu. This program will again be facilitated by Jennifer Stuart, who has served as a faculty fellow for Harvard's Project Zero Summer Institute and for its Wide World online courses.
